Forests for the future

Our UK-grown wood products are sourced from a sustainably-managed woodland, helping to maintain the balance between ecological, economic and sociocultural factors and supporting the viability of UK woodlands in the future. Buying UK wood also benefits local livelihoods, biodiversity and ecosystems, and supports recreational opportunities that support health and wellbeing.

Hand-harvesting

Our UK-grown wood products are hand-harvested. When trees are removed it allows light to penetrate to the woodland floor, enabling new growth and encouraging diversity in the woodland flora and fauna. Hand-harvesting by skilled craftspeople as part of a sustainable management plan allows wood to be extracted sympathetically with minimum disturbance to the natural environment.

Carbon Footprint

As our UK-grown wood grows it traps atmospheric carbon and produces oxygen; once cut it travels a relatively short distance to be processed in our workshop. In contrast, consider a plastic item travelling from far overseas, and the resources, including fossil fuels, that were used to make it.

Biodegradable

Natural untreated wood is fully biodegradable and, with a little help from some fungi, it will decompose, adding nutrients to the ground when it has reached the end of its useable life. Our UK-grown wood products are not treated with any chemicals and are safe to be left to degrade naturally at the end of their lifespan. How about making insect habitats from them?

Nature connection

Connecting to nature from an early age helps instil a deep, sometimes intuitive, sense of our place within the natural world, that leads to a love and respect for our environment. To play and learn with wood is a full sensory experience. The unique character of each piece can be explored, with its bends, knots, flaky bark, different colours, textures and smells.

The Outdoor Hub

Muddy Faces is so much more than 'Just a shop' we are truly passionate about the benefits of play and learning outdoors. Explore our FREE Outdoor Hub a massive online resource to help you get your children outdoors, connecting to nature and each other.

WATERPROOF CLOTHING

Effective clothing is the most important piece of outdoor equipment to enable sustained play outside. The only thing that can equal it, in importance, is the adult supervisors' and setting's attitude. Even with the smallest outdoor space, the support of enthusiastic and supportive adults and effective clothing, children can access the outdoors for sustained periods.

Since 2006, Muddy Faces has been supporting a diverse range of education and play settings to choose the right clothing for their children and staff. Our range of clothing has developed through the feedback and experiences of our customers. Our lighter weight ranges are the most robust and waterproof that we can source for a lower budget. We do not recommend our lightweight ranges for more robust activities such as forest school.

Look after your waterproofs and they will look after you!

It is essential to look after outdoor clothing in the correct manner to help it retain its waterproof level. Every wash reduces the lifespan of the clothing. To find out more, look at our individual brand "Care and sizing guides" on-line.

Free downloads are available on our website to help you dress for the outdoors including explaining layering and a practitioners guide.

HOW WATERPROOF IS THE CLOTHING?

For fabric to be considered waterproof, it must resist the pressure of a column of water 2,000mm tall. The level of resistance is called the hydrostatic head. The higher the hydrostatic head, the more waterproof the material. This is explained in more detail on our website.

We have added a waterproof rating symbol to our waterproof clothing; 4 drops is extremely waterproof down to 1 drop which is water resistant.

 2,000-3,000mm

 4,000-6,000mm

 7,000-9,000mm

 10,000-12,000mm

At Muddy Faces we always advocate quality, waterproof clothing to support sustained outdoor play and learning. Visit our hub for ideas and information on dressing for the outdoors.

Muddy Faces tip: Invest your budget in quality trousers or dungarees, as these are worn whether it's raining or not. Jackets are taken on and off depending on the weather and get less use.

FOREST RANGER COLLECTION

The Forest Ranger collection provides a versatile range of children's waterproofs that are sized to easily slip over clothes, school uniforms and base layers. Machine washable or easy wipe down (please follow washing instructions on label). Waterproof (8,000mm) and windproof with welded seams. Conforms to the OEKO-TEX standard. With easy to use fastenings and reflective trims, they are perfect for Forest School activities and outdoor play. See website for colours.

GIANT BALANCE COURSE -120+ chunky pieces

This large collection of resources offers a huge range of opportunities for developing physicality, problem solving, communication and STEM, all which can be experienced in a real and very physical situation with an element of controlled risk. This large set consists of over 120 chunky pieces of different sized log bases, stepping logs, planks and balance poles, all made from UK grown wood. We have also added a couple of chunky ropes. Why not set a project: what is it? how do we get across? and see where it leads. Soon the children could be working together to cross the yard or alien swamp. This provides for plenty of opportunities to build resilience when their ideas may not succeed the first time. MFK5010 £1289.99

This will be delivered on a pallet to the roadside at your address. It is then your responsibility to move the item from the roadside to where you require it.

SPORTS PREMIUM

We sell a wide range of resources that support children's regular physical activity and play in the outdoor learning environment. Products in this section and our loose parts and den building section will broaden the range of physical activities offered to all pupils outside.

SHELTER FIXING KIT

This is the ultimate shelter fixing kit, with more than enough resources to rig your site, allowing you to erect your large shelters quickly and easily. The kit includes a strong, natural-looking, rot-resistant rope, a length of hose to protect the tree and a screwgate carabiner, to use as your main, overhead line and pulley. It also includes a snap carabiner for quick attachment, 70m of para cord, 25m of thin coloured cord and 10 bungees. This kit should cover all your tying out needs with plenty spare for other projects. Now the fifty bit, we have also put in 9 small carabiners, coloured tape and wooden discs so that you can number up your fixing points. Finally, there is a dry bag to keep everything together.

MFK42

£99.99

MUDDY FACES SHELTERS

Exclusively designed and made in the UK for Muddy Faces. All our shelters are made from a fire-retardant fabric that is 100% waterproof. Please note seams are not sealed. Water will seep through, if a shelter is not erected correctly and water is allowed to pool.

WATERPROOF SHELTERS

The shelter has a webbing strap across the middle, creating a reinforced band, and strength to the central lifting loop. Fixing points are military grade D loops strengthened by triangular gussets. Double folded seams with reinforced edging. A strong and versatile shelter that comes with a storage bag.

Please note that these shelters do not come with ropes and fixings. See our Shelter Fixing Kit on the opposite page.

Campfire cooking

Campfire quesadillas

Ingredients:
plain tortillas
grated cheese
frying oil

Make a passata & grated cheese sandwich with 2 tortillas. Spray some oil into your pan & heat. Pop in your tortilla sandwich and toast on both sides. It's ready when the tortilla puffs up & turns golden brown, with the cheese melting inside. Use a pizza cutter to cut into quarters and serve - don't forget to blow!

Campfire crumble

Cook apples, pears or blackberries in some water and sugar until soft. Sprinkle on some value granola and serve when warmed through. We like to add cold custard!

"Really nice this one & so easy with the granola that doesn't need any actual cooking!"

Campfire orange cakes

Ingredients:
10 medium oranges
175g self-raising flour
1 tsp baking powder
125g caster sugar
125g unsalted butter
2 eggs
1 tsp vanilla extract
1 tbsp hot water
Try bringing your ingredients pre-measured in tubs.

Put the dry items in a bowl & mix. Add the rest of the ingredients & beat until smooth. Slice off the top 1/4 of the orange & scoop out the flesh. Add cake mix to orange until 2/3 full. Pop the top on & wrap in tin foil. Cook at the edges of your embers. Keep rotating & checking - will take 15-30 mins depending on your fire.

You'll find a more detailed recipe on the Outdoor Hub.

Thank you to Sarah Rix of Milford PreSchool Plus for the doughnuts & crumble recipes, and Louise Spellward of Bristol Forest School for campfire quesadillas.

Campfire 'doughnuts'

Make some jam sandwiches. Cut into quarters & take off the crusts. Dip into an egg & milk mixture and fry in butter. Toss through sugar once cooked.

Be careful - the jam inside stays hot - it will need a good blow!

DRAGONS SNEEZE FIRE STEEL AND STARTER

The fire steels are made from a premium quality ferrous rod manufactured in Europe and the fire striker has a hardened steel blade made in the UK. Both steel and striker have chunky ergonomic wooden handles making them easier to use, the handles are turned in the UK.

They are attached by a brightly coloured lanyard to help locate the flint in a natural setting. The lanyard gives a greater range of movement than conventional fire steel systems.

▲ DRAGONS SNEEZE - MEDIUM

Steel size: metal rod: L60mm, dia 6mm; wooden handle: L75mm with 45mm of exposed ferrous rod, overall length 120mm. Striker size: blade: L32mm; handle: L100mm.

NATURE TABLES

Nature tables have gradually been lost from our classrooms and have been replaced by posters and laminated pictures. Research has shown that exposure to the natural world and its myriad of bacteria and chemicals, is hugely beneficial both for our physical and mental wellbeing. So let's bring back the nature table to the classroom.

You do not need to spend money setting up a nature table. Allocate a space, maybe create a sign and start welcoming those fascinating finds. If you're thinking "YUCK", challenge yourself and ask WHY? Why not have a dead spider or wasp or a sheep's jaw. By turning away a child's precious treasure, they could be missing out on a fascinating learning experience for the whole class. Nature tables are also an effective vehicle to involve home life and families.

Tips: To make it easier to maintain and clean your Nature table don't over fill. Set up solutions for less hygienic contributions. Rotate items to keep the table interesting.

RISKY PLAY INTERNATIONALLY

Niki Buchan, renowned International Education consultant, explores approaches to risky play in different countries around the world.

As a child growing up in South Africa we never spoke about 'risky' play, we had adventures, and we were always motivated by the exciting, tummy-churning challenges such opportunities offered us. In common with so many others, our fondest memories were of the adventures we had when there were no adults present. We did things our parents potentially would have disapproved of and things that would be considered far too risky in most societies: we even made secret fires!

Risk-taking is not only physical but also emotional, academic, social. When we talk about risk we often focus on physical risk-taking; on how many band aids we have dispensed and, as practitioners or educators in the UK, Australia or the US, how many stupid accident forms we have filled in!

We can't teach a baby to roll over, to crawl or to walk. They must explore, test their boundaries, and develop these skills themselves through taking their own risks. The minute a baby can walk we often stop them from climbing and running as if we know better than the child's own inner urge or drive. Healthy children generally know what they need to do for their development.

In Australia and the UK, practitioners evidence their duty of care towards the children they work with through completing a rigorous risk assessment using their professional judgement and knowledge; by weighing up the benefits and the risks of play.

I was surprised that this is not common practice in the US and regularly get requests for examples. Written risk assessments are not common in Germany, Norway, Iceland, South Africa, Denmark or Finland. There is a trust and belief that practitioners working with children are capable and competent and will not put children at serious risk.

In Germany it is common to see young children arrive at a Waldkindergarten with a long-bladed knife in a sheath hanging from their backpack. They choose when and where to whittle. I saw small groups of children happily whittling together without an adult in the vicinity.

In Scandinavian countries, fires are commonly seen in children's playgrounds, often not closely supervised by the adults. In a German Waldkindergarten I saw children wander well out of adult sight; two children were also trusted to go well ahead of the group and the practitioners to set up for lunch back in the centre.

Children the world over need to be allowed to challenge themselves, to have the freedom to experience their limitations and their abilities, to practice risk.

Let's make adventurous play a priority when many children are struggling with anxiety. Research shows that taking risks increases confidence, resilience, independence, self-esteem and reduces anxiety. Life is an adventure to be lived from birth; children need to run, climb, jump, tumble, balance, make fires, play in the dark.

They need to live life to the full.

In Norway children set off on their skis out of sight of the adults.

In Denmark, at a centre in an abandoned quarry, children are trusted to move up around the edge of the quarry and out of sight of the adults.

In Iceland children scrambled up rocky inclines ahead of the adult.

In the UK I have found practitioners often fearful of allowing children relatively free access to real tools and fires. Many precautions and control measures surround the use of simple tools such as junior hacksaws and whittlers. Would this contribute to children and adult's already high levels of fear and anxiety rather than fostering respect for the tools and fire? Unfortunately, this is often controlled by insurance companies or occupational health and safety rather than trusting the professional practitioners who understand child development, who know the children in their care, their capabilities and reliability.

Some of these anxieties are now being experienced in Australia. When I post photographs of young children learning to use tools or climbing trees, I regularly have others comment on the 'correct' way, the body position, use of gloves, 3 points of contact etc, totally ignoring my nearly 40 years of experience, knowledge, professionalism, active supervision, dynamic risk assessing and desire not to see children injured.

My experience in China has been that practitioners are generally risk averse and the time in nature is relatively structured. In South Korea, where there is a high number of Forest Schools, adults are less risk averse, and children can move and play out of sight of the adults within a relatively structured session.

6 risky play behaviours

Dr Ellen Sandseter did research in Norway, Australia and the UK and initially identified 6 risky play behaviours children have a desire to explore and will seek out. From my experience these risky play behaviours are urges or drives seen in most children as they feel compelled to test themselves and to continue to develop their own skills. Identifying these play behaviours has had a big impact on adults in the UK and Australia reflecting on the opportunities they offer children, and I am increasingly seeing children being 'allowed' to participate in riskier explorations.

The 6 risky play behaviours identified are:

- exploring height
- experiencing speed
- being near dangerous elements (fire and water)
- rough and tumble play
- using dangerous tools
- moving away from the adult with the risk of 'getting lost'

Later two additional behaviours were added:

- exploring impact
- vicarious risk (young children observing others taking risks)

Personally, I am not sure about the last two. I feel rough and tumble play explores impact and don't see watching others take risks as participating in risky play. As always, I am still open to further reflection and discussion.

Outdoor Play and Learning in Wales

The Curriculum for Wales recognises the benefits of outdoor learning and connecting to nature. Guidance is outlined in the curriculum for funded non-maintained nursery settings:

Being outdoors is particularly important for young children. It supports social, emotional, spiritual and physical development, as well as well-being. Being outdoors can also support high levels of confidence and engagement. In an outdoor environment, children can explore, practise and enhance their skills.

The outdoors provides opportunities to inspire awe and wonder, and allows children to be themselves in open, relaxed and stimulating spaces.

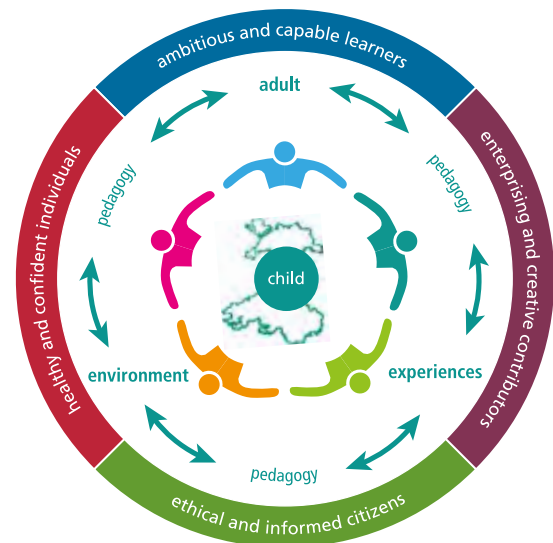

Children who are able to engage and connect with the natural world can build an empathy for the environment, showing an awareness of their potential impact on the living world. They can begin to explore the concept of sustainability in a practical way.

Outdoor environments can provide a range of opportunities for children to improve balance and co-ordination, develop motor function and explore their physical potential. While exploring the outdoors, children can develop their ability to assess and experience risk, helping to develop resilience and confidence.

Professional learning: A curriculum for funded non-maintained nursery settings

Understanding Curriculum for Wales and the development of a curriculum for funded non-maintained nursery settings

How a curriculum was built for practitioners in nursery settings

- Child-centred pedagogy
- Holistic meaningful learning provided by:
  - skilful, observant, interested adults
  - authentic, engaging experiences
  - effective, exciting environments
- Co-constructed by practitioners for practitioners
- Builds on Curriculum for Wales
- Enables children to develop as described in the four purposes of Curriculum for Wales

#PlayLearnGrowWales

To support knowledge and understanding of Curriculum for Wales the Welsh Government have developed two suites of professional learning modules. One suite focuses on the key early years messages underpinning Curriculum for Wales and the other focusses on a curriculum for funded non-maintained nursery settings. All modules are now available on Hwb.

Mudiad Meithrin Trainers

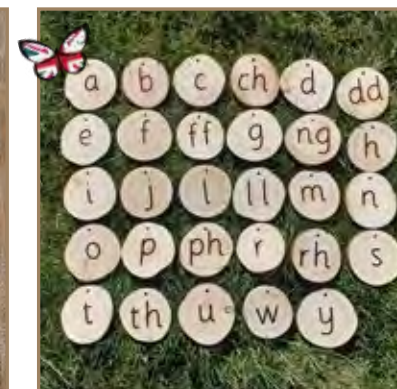

Mudiad Meithrin, a registered charity, which is acknowledged as the main provider of Welsh-medium early years care and education will be running Bod y Tu Allan – Tystysgrif Iefel 3 (Being Outdoors – level 3 certificate), the exciting new course developed by Outdoors Thinking. Bod y Tu Allan aligns perfectly with the Welsh curriculum and will be delivered in the Welsh language. Participating in this course will support you to develop and implement your onsite outdoor provision. # Outdoor play and learning in Scotland

Juliet Robertson is a highly regarded authority on outdoor learning and play and the author of Messy Maths and Dirty Teaching. Juliet highlights some of the important current discussions and reading below.

- The Scottish Government recently undertook a National Discussion on Education. Participatory events involved those who believe in the value of outdoor learning, play, sustainability and nature.
Search: National Discussion Scottish Education
- The Muir Report highlighted outdoor learning and the need to develop values, attitudes, knowledge and skills in the context of Learning for Sustainability, bringing together Education for Sustainable Development (ESD), Global Citizenship Education (GC) and Outdoor Learning (OL). This was felt to be particularly important given the increased profile and relevance of climate change to current and future generations of children and young people.
Putting Learners at the Centre: Towards a Future Vision for Scottish Education, March 2022, p15, 18 & 19
- HM Inspectors for Education Scotland undertook visits to schools, nurseries and community learning projects across Scotland, producing a report that featured key findings and case studies of successful examples of outdoor learning.
Successful Approaches to Learning Outdoors, February 2022
- In the early years, Education Scotland's guidance Realising the Ambition: Being Me continues to be implemented with a strong focus on the need for all children to have daily play outdoors.

Matt Robinson oversees the Scottish team at Ltl who, as well as leading outdoor learning and play training, have authored the book 'Teaching the Primary Curriculum Outdoors'.

Matt has kindly compiled a Did you know? - considerations for outdoor learning in Scotland.

Did you know?

Scotland has a broad range of policies around outdoor learning and play, for all children in Scotland. These have been developed and implemented over the last 15 years.

- Scotland takes a 'Rights based approach' – based from the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child. This impacts not only what is delivered in education and play, but how it is delivered.
- It is a requirement that all children in Scotland have a series of regular, progressive and quality outdoor learning experiences throughout their learning journey.
- In 2013, "Learning for Sustainability" became a curriculum requirement. It was placed central to the learning experience and is seen as the responsibility of all educators, teachers and leaders.
- Scottish teachers have to meet the General Teaching Council for Scotland – Standards for Registration. These include demonstrating a personal commitment to Learning for Sustainability, intentionally seeking outdoor learning opportunities and being supported at leadership level to do so.
- Her Majesties Inspectors of Education (HMIE) have adopted an inspection model How Good is Our School? that asks schools to demonstrate policy, leadership and practice in Learning for Sustainability and outdoor learning. Search HGios 4, 2015
- The Scottish Learning Estate Strategy 2019, highlights the need for high quality outdoor learning and play spaces in all schools. In 2023 Scotland will see a new set of regulations around outside space, updating them to have a broader remit which includes play, learning for sustainability and sport.
- The Scottish 'Going Out There' resource for off-site school trips has now been adopted by all local authorities in Scotland, simplifying processes and taking a risk-benefit approach.

Culture around outdoor learning and play

Despite this strong suite of policies, teachers and early years educators in Scotland often lack confidence and skills. There is much effort being put in around how to support them pre-service in college and universities as well as in-service training.

Every local authority in Scotland has a Scottish Advisory Panel for Outdoor Education (SAPOE) officer, who can support and advise. This is matched with other co-ordinating organisations such as the National Network for Outdoor Learning, and key organisation such as Woodland Learning Scotland, Nature Scot, Learning through Landscapes and John Muir Trust.

Learning through Landscapes

Learning through Landscapes is the UK's leader in outdoor learning and play. It has been helping children and young people to connect to nature, become more active and have fun outdoors for over 30 years.
